Alabama was taken off the train at Waterbury and rushed back to St. Albans, where he died Thursday night. Up to two years ago he was chief of the special car of presidents of the Central Vermont Railway company, having cooked for three different executives of the road. The body was taken to Washington, D. C., for burial.

By playing possum after being tossed by a bull into the corner of a fence, R. G. Whalley of Charlotte probably escaped death. The bull belonging to a neighbor had got into Mr. Whalley's yard, and Mr. Whalley tried to drive the animal off. The bull attacked him and after severe pounding, tossed him into the air. Fortunately, Mr. Whalley landed into the corner of the fence, where he lay perfectly still. After nosing him for a time, the bull left the prostrate man. No bones were broken, but the bull's gash on the chest from the bull's horns.

The vigilance of the prohibition enforcement officers is being increased in a measure by the docket of the United States district court which will go into session at Montpelier. This is the adjourned session of the May term of the court. Out of the 105 cases which will come up for trial at this term there are 64 for alleged infractions of the national prohibition act. Other cases are made up mostly of alleged infractions of the customs regulations. The large number of criminal cases, taken together with the large number of cases of "bootleg" now stored in various parts of the state, which have been taken from the rum runners, show that considerable work is being done.

Claiming in his defense that he was carrying junk and not liquor, Joseph Carminara of North Adams, Mass., impressed some of the jury in a Bennington court so much that the jury disagreed in the trial of the case charging the transportation of liquor. Carminara declared that he was taken to a lonely spot near a stone quarry in Pownal for a load of junk, as he supposed. He was accompanied by a North Adams man, who loaded the "junk" into the automobile from the side of the road, where it had been concealed in some bushes. While the truck was passing through North Pownal on the way to North Adams a constable appeared, the companion fled and Carminara was arrested. There were nearly 100 quarts of Canadian whiskey in the automobile.

If He Would Only Be Reasonable

HAS SON IN CHELSEA.

Gen. Herbert E. Tuthery Found Dead at Claremont, N. H.

Claremont, N. H., Aug. 15.—Gen. Herbert E. Tuthery, retired, was found dead in bed Saturday afternoon at his residence on Washington st. He was ill Wednesday, but improved so that he discharged his attendant last night and told the physicians that he was feeling better than he had been for some time.

He issued orders that he should not be disturbed by his farm hands, so therefore was not found until after-noon, when one of his men entered the house and found him dead. Dr. Leonard Jarvis stated that he died from cerebral hemorrhage and that he had been dead some hours, evidently dying in the night.

He was 73 years of age, appointed cadet at West Point, 1868, and has worked his way up in military honors to his present commission. Served in several wars, survived by son, George C. of Chelsea, Vt., a brother, William, a lawyer in New York city. Recent years he conducted a large farm, living alone since the death of his wife about three years ago. He spent the winter months this year in Europe.

Pistol Practice at Fort Ethan Allen.

In accordance with the present policy of the postoffice department to provide firearms for the use of railway postal clerks in the various mail trains throughout the country, arrangements have been made whereby the clerks may have the privilege of receiving instructions in the use of the 45-caliber Colt automatic revolvers provided by the department, as well as practice in the use of the same.

It has been arranged that clerks may practice and receive instructions at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., Springfield army, Springfield, Mass., and in the rifle range in the postoffice building at Boston, and it is anticipated that there will be considerable rivalry between the various clerks for the best marksmanship.

Since firearms have been issued to be carried by clerks in mail trains the number of mail train robberies has materially decreased, and as the clerks become accustomed to the use of firearms it is presumed that the number will be still less.
